Twin architecture

A time-evolving patient-state representation, not a prediction model. Four layers feed one latent state; both readouts are read from that state, and the result updates it.

Personalisation is learned from data carrying no freezing labels, so it cannot leak the prediction target. At n = 36 (ablation cohort) the ablations show the personalisation branches did not improve either readout.